September 2015 Speaker

Wednesday, September 9, 7:30 pm. Doors open at 7.

Speaker: Jeffrey deJong, Horticulturist, Victoria, British Columbia

“Historical Influences of Gardening”

Our 2015 Louise Beck Guest Lecturer, Jeffrey deJong, will present a journey through history, touching on some of the most influential and important garden styles. The gardens may simply be beautiful, or more practical in their appearance and function, but every culture throughout history has led to the modern garden of today.

Jeff is an instructor in horticulture and has taught at Colorado State University and Olds College in Alberta, Canada. He is an award winning garden designer, garden speaker, and garden writer, and leads garden tours to New Zealand, Europe and South Africa. He was the site manager at Abkhazi Garden, a part of the The Land Conservancy in Victoria, British Columbia.

Jeff broadcasts a weekly radio program “Gardening 101” on tunein radio – check it out! Go to http://tunein.com and search for “Gardening 101.” You also can find a link to this radio show on our website, http://westernhort.org.

Transitions: Elizabeth Garbett With great sadness we report that long-time beloved friend and WHS member Elizabeth Garbett passed away on July 3, 2015. In the October 2015 issue of this newsletter, we will be running your remembrances of Elizabeth along with those sent us by her family. Her family has generously donated $1,000 along with Elizabeth’s many garden and plant books to WHS. Please send your memories of Elizabeth Garbett to Marianne Mueller at mrm@sonic.net or 333 Kingsley Ave., Palo Alto, CA 94301. ~Marianne Mueller, Editor, Western Hort News

28 Years Ago Western Hort met on September 9, 1987 to hear “Kathryn Mathewson, a landscape architect from San Francisco, on ‘Garden ‘THEMES’. She will show us how every little bit goes together for the whole AND the importance of plant combinations.” An internet search shows that she is now in San Jose, still working, and has numerous commercial and residential projects to her credit.

There was a name drawn from among the paid-up new and renewing members for a free first choice at the raffle. Announcements included an October 11th field trip to Lurline Roth Coonan’s garden. Mrs. Coonan (now 94) and her sister, the late Berenice Roth Spalding, were the twin daughters of the last private owners of Filoli. Mrs. Coonan’s garden had been featured in American Women’s Gardens.

I was particularly charmed by several of Elizabeth Garbett’s comments from the plant notes; on Marjorie Branagh’s Pardancanda norrissii: (despite) “Park Seed Co’s more effulgent bursts of catalog hype, in this writer’s garden they did not ‘flower freely from July to fall and produce a kaleidoscope of color’, but snails came from miles around to feast on them” and “Lyn Dearborn can find orchids anywhere, even in the wilds of Stanislaus County where she discovered rattlesnake plantain, Goodyera oblongifolia” and a description of the inflorescence of Betsy Clebsch’s eastern Mediterranean gathered Origanum rotundifolium seed, grown by Ed Carman, “as plump and dense as Shirley Temple curls”. Ahh, Elizabeth, we do miss you. ~Nancy Schramm

May 2015 Speaker Notes Anyone who left early on summer vacation and skipped the May WHS meeting missed out on one of the most informative meetings of the year. Our very own Katie Wong presented the talk “Upgrade Your Garden—Download Rare Fruits”. Katie began by tempting us with photos of some delicious-looking tropical fruit: durian, jack fruit, mangosteen, wax jambu, papayas, mangos, and pineapple, then warned us that she would not be talking about any of these plants because we cannot grow them here without supplemental heat. Instead, Katie took us on a ‘round-the-world exploration of hardy and subtropical rare fruits that can grow in most of our gardens here in the Bay Area.

Katie was kind enough to give us a handout listing the plants she has selected for “their landscape qualities, suitability for container growing, ease of maintenance and adaptability to our climate.” On the list, plants are grouped by continent of origin, and helpful information includes common and botanical names, size, water needs and minimum temperature.

In the hands of a less knowledgeable or skillful speaker, a talk like this can quickly descend into a tedious series of pictures accompanied by one plant name after another. Not so with Katie! You could tell that these plants are her friends the way she spoke about them with fondness, with authority and with humor. She was able to talk about each plant she showed without referring to notes, sharing tips about cultivation and fascinating bits of trivia, like the fact that Ugni molinae was one of Queen Victoria’s favorite fruits, the Cudriana tricuspidata tastes like sweet watermelon, Eleagnus umbellata (aki-gumi) has 17x the lycopene of tomatoes, and the ice cream bean (Ignedulis) pods taste like cotton candy. She even supplied us with some delicious fruit from her garden for our own tasting pleasure: white sapote and juneberry.

Katie’s talk certainly encouraged us all to expand our edible plant palette to include fruits from far away places and exotic cultures. Growing rare fruits in our own gardens is like going on vacation with every bite! ~Nancy Schramm
